BIGFO

IDAHO MAN RUNS DOWN

By T.B. ROVE

IDAHO TRUCKER Red Fenwick ran over and killed a 750-pound bigfoot in his 12 ton semi just days ago and we've got the world-exclusive photograph to prove it.

The stark, black-and-white picture clearly shows one of the most elusive creatures known to man squashed flat and sprawled lifeless on a two-lane highway with tire tracks on his filthy, furry back.

Fenwick says the towering 8-foot monster "probably never even knew what hit him" after he darted in front of the trucker's 18-wheeler a few minutes before dawn on January 14.

"By the time I hit my brakes it was too late . . . I was a quarter mile down the road and in my rear-view mirror I could see the body jerking around and twitching like a teenager on top of a party girl," says Fenwick, 52, of Cascade.

"By the time I finally got all the way stopped and turned around to go back and see if I could help, my heart was beating so fast I thought it was gonna jump right out of my chest.

"I didn't know I'd cut down a bigfoot. I thought maybe I'd hit a hobo or some punk kid on a trail bike.

BIGFOOT WITH 18-WHEELER!

"When I got closer I remember thinking, 'Hmmmm. Something ain't right . . .'

"It sure weren't no kid laying out there in the road. And I don't care how long they've been out in the woods — hobos don't get that hairy."

Taking a closer look, Fenwick realized that the creature — whatever it was — had stopped twitching and was dead.

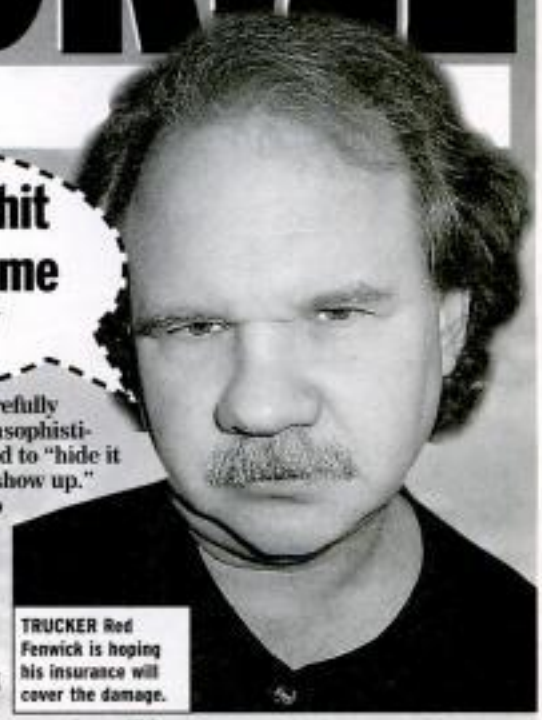
"I started to dial 911 on my cell phone," he says. "But then I got to thinking.

"If that thing escaped from a circus, I was going to get sued if I reported it. So I called my son and asked him what to do. He said, 'Dad, it sounds like you hit a Bigfoot.'

"Randy's one of them smart-ass university professors, so I reckoned he knew what he was talking about."

Dr. Randall Fenwick says he also knew that scientists from all over the world "were going to want a piece of the research action" on the corpse, so he carefully instructed his unsophisticated trucker dad to "hide it before the cops show up."

'I thought I hit a hobo or some punk kid!'



TRUCKER Red Fenwick is hoping his insurance will cover the damage.

He declines to say where the Bigfoot body is now to avoid what he calls "a media circus."

But in a brief statement issued through the university, he said the remains will be subjected "to an autopsy and exhaustive DNA testing" in the hope of determining how closely related the creature is to humans and where it belongs on the evolutionary ladder.

"When it comes to running over and killing something, taking out a Bigfoot is like winning the lottery," says Fenwick. "Now I'm just hoping my insurance company don't give me no guff.

WINDWOOD has been described by a leading black music critic as "fairly talented."

GEEZER IS PHENOM

By KARL WASHINGTON

WRINKLED RAPPER Horace Windwood is the world's oldest hip-hop artist — at the mind-twisting age of 107!

He's currently cutting a CD with catchy tunes like Whippersnapper Luv, Wish I Had a Woody, Blue-Haired Ho from Kokomo, Whar Muh Teeth?, Ehhh?, Early-Bird-Special and Whose Buick is that in my Swimming Pool? The album is expected to sell briskly, especially to nursing homes and doctor's offices that cater to senior citizens who are sure to appreciate the old goat's views on love and life.

"Yo-yo! Yo! I'm gettin' jiggling wit' it, homing boy," Windwood — who has been described by a leading black music critic as "fairly talented" — told Weekly World News in an exclusive interview from the assisted-living facility he calls home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"Who are you?" he added. "What are you doing in my house? Do I know you? I'm calling the police! Get out!"

Although memory lapses such as the one that almost got this reporter arrested for trespassing can make it difficult to interview Windwood, his recording sessions in the studio are said to be seamless works of art.

The old man spent his entire adult life singing in a church choir. He often was pegged to lead raucous "call and response" hymns that musicologists say are the foundations of hip-hop.

And when he got "the rap bug," as he puts it, late last summer, "it wasn't something I needed a good memory for — I just grabbed a microphone and started shaking my money generator the way the young colored people on TV do it.

Dear Editor, I think the little football-shaped pups Jack Wills bred (Jan. 3, 2005) are the cutest things I've ever seen!

I have three little dachshunds of my own at home and they're kind of round in the belly like the football pups, but they're just fat from eating too many treats.

I would love to know how to contact Jack to get one of these pooches of my own. I know there's a waiting list and the 2,005 he plans to unveil at the Super Bowl are already spoken for, but I want to get in line! – May Murrin, Amasa, Mich.

You'll have to keep a look out for ads, May. Jack says he won't go public until he's got enough of the little pooches in stock.

TIGER, the first successfully bred football dog, is said to be making his national debut at next month's Super Bowl.

Dear Editor, Why can't people just leave well enough alone? Why is it we're always trying to figure out where we came from and decipher the missing link between us and apes?

Now some guy is trying to say humans are the result of aliens having sex with apes (Jan. 10, 2005). For the love of God, people. Aliens and monkeys? You're saying I'm half alien, half monkey?

Well, I think that man is ALL crazy. And he can take his book Perverts from the Stars: The Thoroughly Sickening Origin of Man and shove it for trying to say we're some wacky alien/ape mutation.

SATAN ISSUING CREDIT CARDS

— & if you can't pay he takes your soul

By SCOTT STEVENS

THE next time you get an unsolicited credit card offer, take an extra close look. If it's from the Pitchfork Finance Company, missing a payment might cost you your soul – that's because Satan has entered the credit card business.

"Talk about usurious interest rates," says Henry Gottlieb, a top financial advisor. "Losing your soul forever because you missed a payment on a TV, man, that's a little disproportionate."

According to Gottlieb, Satan got the idea while watching repo men repossess people's worldly goods.

"When Satan saw the misery it caused families who lost their possessions, he declared, 'What a great job! I must get into this field!' "

But Satan found breaking into the credit card industry tougher than expected.

"Satan isn't used to dealing with pure evil on Earth," Gottlieb says. "But some of the credit card companies come close."

But Satan found he could grab customers by charging NEGATIVE interest rates – when you buy something, the store pays YOU interest.

Of course, that quickly changes. Before long, consumers can't pay the high rates, and Satan swoops in.

Says Gottlieb, "Satan loves it

MR. POTATO HEAD BANNED IN IDAHO!

By DORIAN WAGNER

THE IDAHO Potato Anti-defamation Council has voted unanimously to ban Mr. Potato Head because he makes a mockery of the state's famous crop.

The group, responsible for promoting Idaho potatoes, decided the measure was necessary in order uphold the sanctity of the state's spuds.

"We just don't see the humor in poking our precious potatoes with silly hats and funny faces," says council member, Richard Drewe. "Potatoes are serious business around here and we don't want to ruin their appeal."

Although Idaho already grows 30 percent of the nation's potato supply, the council's goal is to raise that number even higher.

To that effect, enforcement of the new ruling will begin on the first of February, in honor of National Potato Lover's Month.

"Idaho is more recognizably connected to potatoes than even California to grapes," Drewe says. "And you don't see anyone playing with California Raisins anymore do you?

"So obviously Mr. Potato Head has to go too."

But a spokesman for the Mr. Potato Head fan club, plans to fight the ban.

"Mr. Potato Head is more than just a plain old spud – he's a sum of his parts and kids love

New govt. study confirms it . . .

CHUNKY

By TEDDIE CLOVE

A NEW government study proves it beyond the shadow of a doubt: Fat girls are better in bed than pretty girls.

They're ready, willing and able to go the extra mile to keep a guy interested, says the research, and that includes shamelessly degrading themselves in the sack for even a few minutes of attention.

And kinky isn't the word for the sizzling sexual performances these "super-size females" are willing to engage in night after electrifying night in their desperate and pitiful attempts to avoid "the twin banes of homeliness: Loneliness and rejection," the landmark study says.

"What your father told you is true — blubbery babes really do try harder in bed," declares Dr. Kaye Mulroony, who spearheaded what's being hailed as the U.S. Department of Agriculture's first foray into the study of male-female relations.

"If a man enjoys sloppy foreplay, for instance, a fatter female is very likely to go to the job with unprecedented gusto, giving him a 'tongue-lashing' he'll never forget.

"And for sheer duration of intimacies, nobody can beat chubby chicks.

"We've seen strapping young pool boy-types in their late teens and early 20s crawl away from scale-crushing cuties after their love sessions. These worn-out stud-muffins were on all fours, often begging us to 'make her stop,' or, 'get her off me — please!' "

The study focused on 86 sexually active women between the ages of 18 and 76, half of whom were judged to be "fat" on the Sims-Biner Female Unattractiveness Scale, a standard tool of psychology.

To observe the ladies in action, USDA researchers funded a weekly "singles mixer" at agency headquarters in Washington, D.C., allowing a control group of 117 male employees to "chat up" and bed whomever they pleased.

After sex, the men filed exhaustive reports describing their encounters in graphic detail.

By compiling data from the reports, Dr. Mulroony and her team were able to establish "a clear and undeniable link between excess weight and enhanced sexual performance" in female test subjects.

"A common complaint from male employees who bedded attractive women was that the ladies were 'cold fish' and 'just laid there' and 'faked it,'" says Dr. Mulroony.

"But when describing tubby tootsies the praise was glowing.

"They used expressions like 'she was all over me' and 'sex machine' and 'I thought my chunky girl was going to swallow me whole.' "

The USDA plans to publish a full report on the study in U.S. Government Publication 362436-DD later this year.

"We encourage men who are sexually frustrated to take this research to heart," says Dr. Mulroony. "Instead of chasing after 'sex goddesses' who are going to be duds in bed anyway, they can pay more attention to gargantuan gals who are clinically proven to be hot."

SAD PORCUPINE

He wants a gal to be stuck on him

By ZACH BRANNIGAN

ARTHUR Macree may be the loneliest man in the world. His back is covered with stiff, sharp quills, making him a human porcupine!

"I haven't had a successful date in years," Macree says. "Sometimes I'll meet a girl in a bar, and I'll be doing well, until she sees me with my shirt off. Once she gets a look at my pointy spikes, it's all over."

Noted biologist Theodore Flugan notes, "From time to time, human beings take on the characteristics of animals. Famous examples of this include the Elephant Man and Jo-Jo the Dog-Faced Boy. Sadly, there is no known cure for this condition."

Macree has considered having surgery to remove the quills, but his doctors could kill me," he explains. "So it looks like I'll be stuck being Porcupine Man forever."

Macree has had to make some unusual adjustments due to his condition. "Sleeping on my back is not an option," he notes. "Driving a car is extremely difficult. And I've never found a girl willing to make love to me, but if I did, I'd have to do it very carefully."

Macree was not born with his quills — he notes, "If I had been, that would've been a very painful birth for my moth-

His condition made for a rough time growing up. "I had to switch to home schooling, because all the kids at school made fun of me. No girl wants to dance at the prom with a porcupine. Worst of all, I couldn't even play football anymore. I tried it once. A guy tried to tackle me and he cut his hand really bad."

Macree says his life has improved somewhat since his high school days. "I've gotten pretty good at covering up my quills, so most people don't know they're there." He wears a special harness which conceals his condition.

"I tried wearing regular shirts," he says, "but the quills kept poking through."

Macree works as an insurance adjustor in northern Michigan. He keeps busy with his many hobbies, including mountain-biking, hiking and fishing.

He has good friends, but still, he longs for female companionship. "What woman would want to be with me?" he asks. "I haven't met the gal yet who could deal with this deformity. All I really want is to find somebody to hug."

Macree has tried conventional dating methods, but nothing

FISH HEAD, bird body!

Scientist breeds fish with bird!

IT'S A 'FIRD'

By MARK MILLER

A SCIENTIST on special assignment for the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, Species Combination Division, has succeeded in mating a fish with a bird to create a creature he calls a "fird."

This is especially gratifying in light of a recently failed attempt to mate a tiger with a bird to create a "tird." After 15 years of trying, Dr. Rana Thomas and his team successfully mated a trout with a blue jay.

"Dimming the lights, lighting some incense, and playing romantic Johnny Mathis music seemed to get them in the mood," reports Thomas. "Especially the song 'Misty.' " The resulting six offspring are thriving and being studied closely by a worldwide team of scientists.

"We're very excited that the fird can both fly through the air and swim underwater," says Thomas. "Also, we cooked and tasted one of the firds – kind of tastes like chicken, actually. And obviously, it can appear in both the seafood and gourmet wildlife sections of a restaurant's menu."

There is already great demand for the fird from fisheries, aviaries, and restaurants around the globe. Thomas's team will now move on to completing its next challenge. "We're very close to successfully mating a flounder with a duck to create a . . . well, you know."

MYSTERY OF THE BERMUDA TOILET

People who sat on this 'throne' vanished

By BERNIE PYLE

A MYSTERIOUS toilet is responsible for the disappearance of 17 people who sat down on it, and were never seen again!

"It sounds impossible, but they seem to have been sucked down through the toilet seat, into the very bowels of the Earth," says Arthur Hague, a top investigator at Poof!, the internationally respected detective agency dealing with paranormal disappearances.

Already the perilous potty is being compared to the notorious Bermuda Triangle where countless ships and planes have vanished.

"We call it 'The Bermuda Toilet,' " Hague says. "It's like the Bermuda Triangle, only on a commode.

"Most people go to the toilet to move their bowels. In this case, bowels move THEM," Hague says.

"I've heard of people's lives going down the toilet, but this is ridiculous."

Theories abound as to where the victims disappear. One scientist thinks it's a "vortex to another dimension." A Vatican spokesman posits that the toilet is a portal to Hell.

"We think the disappearances have a spiritual component because the last thing most of the victims were heard exclaiming was 'Holy sh%#!' " the Vatican spokesman says.

tractor beam, developed by space aliens so they can abduct earthlings for probing, without having to fly all the way here to do so.

"It makes a lot of sense," Hague says. "First of all, with the price of gas these days, interplanetary space travel costs are going through the ROOF.

"But think of this: What do aliens do when they abduct someone? They probe them anally. Well, before you went to all the trouble of kidnapping someone from another planet, wouldn't YOU want to check out the goods beforehand? What better way to do that than when they're sitting on a toilet?

"It's well known that space

"This way, the aliens screen for the best butts, and then — whoosh! — they transport them to their labs." He adds sinisterly, "It's brilliant!"

Law enforcement officials have refused to reveal the location of the toilet, which is a public facility.

"We haven't ruled out the possibility that this is some kind of foul play," says Scotland Yard investigator Ridgely Britton. "So we're hoping the Bathroom Bandit will slip up and, if you will, leave a paper trail."

But critics charge that keeping the toilet's location a secret endangers the public.

"You have to be an ass yourself not to see that," says one anonymous critic.

But investigator Hague says he's confident he'll solve the mystery.

"I'll get to the bottom of this, so to speak. I'm going to 'crack'

3 OUT OF 5 BLIND PEOPLE ARE FAKING IT!

By MARK MILLER

SHOCKING new research reveals that three out of five blind people are not blind at all – they're just pretending to be blind!

Zenarosa Research International (ZRI), specializing in research studies of the handicapped, surveyed 10,000 blind people worldwide over a 10 year period. In any given year, and in any given country, three out of five "blind" people admitted they were faking it.

"They gave all sorts of reasons for pretending to be blind," reveals Zenarosa president Will Kane. "Some are doing it for easy money and government support, some for pity and sympathy, many just for the attention." These "blind" people will often use sunglasses, canes and dogs that have not gone through training but are nonetheless outfitted with a guide dog harness and leash.

"It's disgusting, isn't it?" says Kane. "I feel like backhanding some of these jerks and turning them in, but as a researcher, I'm sworn to be impartial."

ZRI is also completing research studies of Alzheimer's disease patients pretending to have Alzheimer's disease, cancer patients pretending to have cancer, and arthritis sufferers pretending to have arthritis. "There are literally millions of people in the world," states Kane, "who simply do not have the afflictions they claim to have. They may not be sick, but what they're doing is definitely sick."

MICROWAVE CHANNEL

By BERNIE PYLE

THE NEWEST cable network food channel is for people too lazy to cook: It's called The Microwave Channel, and all its programs consist of lazy slobs popping dishes in the microwave.

"This is the ultimate network for slackers, slobs, working moms, latchkey kids and anyone too lazy to boil water," says program director Darryl Farber. "Almost all our shows consist of tearing off the top of a frozen entree, putting it in the microwave, and waiting."

Still, the network is the fastest growing channel on cable.

Some of the other shows include:

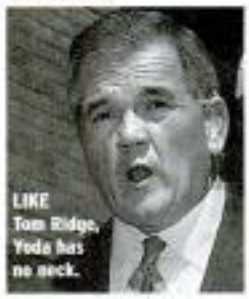
IN a bombshell revelation that shocked even his closest Republican supporters, President George W. Bush announced that his new director of Homeland Security would be Yoda, the famed Jedi master from the Star Wars films.

White House insiders reveal that Bush got the idea after watching the new Stars Wars DVD set he said Santa gave him for Christmas.

"Yoda may not look like much on the outside," the commander in chief told a stunned White House press corps. "But the little guy is one heck of a warrior.

"Anybody with half a brain can see he's the perfect choice."

Bush noted that he was also impressed with the fact that Yoda is pint-size.



LIKE Tom Ridge, Yoda has no neck.

"I'll tower over him at press conferences — which is important since I'm the president," he added.

On the face of it, the 894-year-old Yoda, a member of an undisclosed alien species, would seem like a good replacement for outgoing Homeland Security boss Tom Ridge.

Like Ridge, Yoda doesn't have a neck.

Also, Yoda is a master of The Force and has trained some of the top Jedi knights in the Star Wars galaxy, including Obi-Wan-Kenobi, Mace Windu, Qui-Gon-Jinn, Luke Skywalker and even Darth Vader, who turned evil that Cabinet members were shocked when Bush announced his decision.

Vice President Dick Cheney reportedly blurted out, "But Yoda doesn't exist!"

Still, the President refused to budge.

"Bush shot back, 'So what?,' " says the source. " 'I'm the president. If I say we're winning the war in Iraq, then we're winning it. If I say Saddam and Al Qaeda are linked, then they are. If I say we'll find weapons of mass destruction there, then we will — eventually. Trust me on that one.' "

Adds the source, "As usual, Bush refused to change his mind even after learning that Yoda isn't real."

Instead, Bush told the Cabinet he was especially impressed with Yoda's 500-year track record in "fighting evildoers, like that Garth Vader guy."

He added, "And I'm particcaused by evil acts. I see that ability to be an asset in predicting when and where our most vile enemies, like Osama Bin Laden, Abu al-Zarqawi and Michael Moore, will strike."

Even top political advisor Karl Rove tried to dissuade the President, pointing out that Yoda dies in Star Wars: Episode VI — Return of the Jedi. But the President just clamped his hands over his ears and screamed, "Don't tell me what happens! I haven't seen that one yet."

White House chief of staff Andrew Card also noted that as an alien, Yoda may face trouble being confirmed by Congress.

"Well, I'm willing to cash in some of my political capital on this one," Bush said. "But first we'll have to get our friends at INS to give him a quickie green card."

But real, I am not.

Bush says one of the first things he expects the new director of Homeland Security to do is revamp the national terror attack warning system, which is now color-coded.

HOW TO HAVE A SECRET SECOND FAMILY

By SCOTT STEVENS

IF YOUR family is too much for you, try relaxing with a second one! That's the advice of Jeremy Stoppard, author of Non-Sloppy Seconds: How to Keep a Secret Second Family.

"Going back home to the same family each night can be a drag," Stoppard says. "But ironically, having a SECOND family can make each one seem like a vacation from the other."

Some of Stoppard's tips include:

● Only marry one of the women, or else get an alias. "Bigamy is still illegal in the United States."

● Tell both families you work for the CIA. "Then forbid them to talk about you to anyone. That cuts down on the risk of being found out. Also, it gives you an excuse if you're ever caught with your other family's possessions."

● Keep a regular schedule. "You need consistent excuses, like "Every Thursday, Friday and Saturday I have to go on a secret mission."

● Don't have two spouses with the same first name. "You DON'T want to answer the phone by saying, "Jane? WHICH Jane?"

● Keep both families at least 10 miles apart. "Any closer, and you risk running into the other one."

● Have a friend – preferably one who also has a second family – to cover for you. "Sometimes you need someone to vouch for where you say you were."

● Keep separate credit cards and wardrobes. "Or else you'll hear a lot of 'Honey, where'd you get this shirt . . .?"

MY NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS FOR 2005

I'M MADDER than Father Time with a leaky hourglass at all these nosy busybodies who keep asking me about my New Year's resolutions!

Ever since January 1, seems like every simple-minded fool at church and the office has come up and asked me what I've sworn off of this year.

A man's solemn oaths to himself are supposed to a private matter, by jiminy – that way, if he breaks 'em, no one will be any the wiser.

Quite frankly, I hate hearing some fat receptionist yap about how she plans to peel off 10 pounds, then have to watch her stuff her face with every Krispy Kreme she lays her eyes on the first time someone brings donuts to the newsroom.

But since so many

Here are Ed Anger's New Year's resolutions for 2005:

NO MORE CALLING DEMOCRATS 'DEMO-RATS'

A lot of my readers of the liberal persuasion are real sore about that one and have been begging me to lay off. So I've come up with a new nickname for the party: Demon-rats.

NO MORE PADDLING MY WIFE THELMA JEAN FOR NOT MINDING HER CHORES!

The ol' gal has packed on too many pounds for now on, I'll just cut back on her $15-a-week allowance anytime she falls behind on polishing my fishing trophies or dusting my typewriter.

TAKE MY GRANDNEPHEWS HUNTING EVERY WEEKEND

They're getting to be big fellas now, ages 3, 4 and 5. It's high time they start learning what being a man is all about and get a chance to bag their first wild turkey.

SMOKE ONE CIGAR A DAY!

Some days I plum forget to pack a stogie in my briefcase. A good cigar a day is part of the health regimen that kept geezers like George

NO MORE CUSSING!

A top Bible scholar expert wrote to tell me that saying "gol-durned" and "dang" will get you to Hell just as quick as spitting out #&% or @#$.

LEARN TO USE AN ELECTRIC TYPEWRITER!

The publisher has been bugging me to "join the 20th century" for years and I reckon I oughta try to please him. But don't worry, buckaroos — I'll keep on using my trusty old Royal for columns. Real writers use manual typewriters, as I've always said.

I know the Bible forward and backward, but Thelma Jean says it's disrespectful to call a man of the cloth an "idiot" for disagreeing with me about the finer points of the Scriptures.

DIAPER DANDIES

By MARK MILLER

THE LATEST hot craze to hit college campuses is something the students most likely haven't done for twenty years – wearing diapers rather than using the toilet!

"We enjoy going number one, but we especially enjoy going number two, and so prefer the adult-size disposable diapers with leakage-control shields that gently hug the inside of our legs to help stop unsightly messes," explains Sherman Adams, president of Franklin & Marshall College's Diaper Fetish Club, in Lancaster, Pa.

The club, one of thousands of such clubs on college campuses across America, caters to students who enjoy diaper fetishes, adult diapers, adult baby clothes, plastic pants and infantilism.

"We also have fun with rubber pants, disposable diapers, pacifiers, sleepers, bodysuits, bed wetter pants and other big baby clothing," adds Adams.

"And, of course, we just have a ball with adult baby games, live conferences, chat rooms, a private on-line club, publishing our newsletter and sponsoring exciting weekend Wet-Your-Pants parties. It's perfect for anyone who enjoys being an adult baby."

At first glance, the desire to wear and use diapers like a baby, to act like a baby and be treated like a baby, might seem perverted,

NEW GARDEN SLUG DIET MELTS AWAY FLAB!

By BERNIE PYLE

MOVE OVER, Atkins! The newest diet sensation sweeping the nation consists of recipes containing garden slugs.

"Garden slugs are the most foul, disgusting, gross, repellent creatures imaginable," says Lucius Buckworthy, author of Slug It Out: The Garden Slug Diet to Shed Pounds Fast.

"That makes them the perfect diet food!

"You pop one or two of these slimy slugs in your mouth at breakfast time, and Voila! You've lost your appetite for the rest of the day!"

Buckworthy says there are other advantages to eating slugs. "They're much easier to catch than, say, fish. You can find them just lying in your driveway or basement, and they move pretty slow.

"Also, garden slugs can destroy your garden. So by eating them, you're not only losing weight, you're saving your flowers.

"And who knows? Maybe the other slugs will see you eating them, and learn not to mess with your garden.

"Finally, slugs are also cheap. Free, actually. You can't give them away."

Buckworthy got the idea for his book a couple of years ago, when he was homeless.

"Slugs kept me alive. They tasted horrible, horrible. But I had no choice."

One day Buckworthy overheard someone remark that the problem with most diets is the food tastes too good.

"I remembered eating the slugs, and thought, 'You wouldn't have THAT problem with a diet of slugs!' "

Buckworthy concocted his recipes through trial and error.

WARNING: The New Garden Slug Diet is not for everyone. Always consult your physician before starting any new diet.

"I learned that if you put salt on a slug, it dehydrates and shrivels up. And that a good way to kill slugs is to put them next to a tinful of beer. They sip it, get drunk, fall in the beer, and drown."

While some nutritionists scoff at Buckworthy's "aversion diet," he scoffs back. "My diet helps you lose weight fast. I'd rather eat slugs than BE a slug."

CRUISE SHIP EVICTS PARTIERS — AT SEA!

ROWDY cruise ship passengers who disobeyed the captain's orders to quiet down were kicked off the ship – while it was still in the middle of the ocean!

"They were carrying on loudly at 3 a.m.," says ship captain Ben Jenson, commander of the SS Tranquility. "So I asked them to please stop making such a ruckus because they were going overboard. When they didn't respond, that's where they went – overboard!"

Jenson says the Tranquility revelers chose this ship to sail on. We turn the lights off at 10.

"But I run a tight ship. I brook no dissent."

Jenson had the four party animals placed in a rowboat. Then he gave them one meal – leftovers from the night before – and sent them on their way.

"They couldn't believe it," Jenson says. "As our ship was pulling away, I heard them yelling 'Oh, God! I see sharks! Help! Help!' "

"I yelled back, 'That'll teach you to disobey the captain!' "

FORGET THE DIET SHAKES & HAVE A SLUGFEAST INSTEAD!

SLUG SMOOTHIE – Take 2 slugs, put in a blender. Mix in with 2 cups of cranberry juice, cup yogurt, and ice. Blend for 1 minute, or until the slug is "smooth." Hold nose. Drink.

GARDEN SLUG A LA KING – Saute two 3-inch slugs. Heat up a can of cream of mushroom soup. Mix. Serve over toast.

STUFFED SLUG – Slice open a medium-size slug. Pour out all the ooze. Grind up some earthworms, bread crumbs, and mushrooms. Put mixture into the slug. Bake for 30 minutes. Cover with cheese. Pour the ooze over the slug and serve.

SLUGBURGER DELUXE – Grind up three slugs. Put in onions, peanuts, ground pepper. Shape into patties. Put on grill. Serve on a garnished bun with tomatoes and pickle.

TEXAS SLUG – Fry up two eggs, removing yolk. Cut a hole in a piece of toast. Stick a boiled slug through the hole in the toast, so that it sticks out equally on both sides, and goes through the egg where the yolk was. Serve with ketchup.

RODNEY DANGERFIELD GETTING 'NO RESPECT' IN HEAVEN!

By SCOTT STEVENS

RODNEY DANGERFIELD, the bug-eyed, tie-tugging comedian who made a career out of getting "no respect" died a couple of months ago, but things haven't changed. Now – as Weekly World News reported in its Dec. 13, 2004, issue – he's in Heaven, but even there he's being dissed.

According to a close friend who talks to Dangerfield regularly through a psychic, the comic is having a tough time. "Rodney spent his life among the world's sinners. Heaven's the last place he expected to go."

But Dangerfield hasn't lost his sense of humor, according to his friend. "This is what Rodney told me:

"When I got to the pearly gates, I said to Peter, 'Hey, this is Heaven!' and Peter said, 'Not anymore. YOU'RE here.' Then one day, Satan paid a visit. I said, 'Hey, Satan, I was no saint on Earth. How come I'm not down in your place?' and Satan said, 'The poor souls there have SUFFERED ENOUGH!' Finally, I met God himself. I said, 'God, I hate it here. There's no gambling, no alcohol, no sex. I'm miserable. I thought Heaven was a place where there's tremendous happiness.' And God replied, 'It is. Everybody else here

DEFENDANT CRACKS UNDER PRESSURE

— & REVEALS COCAINE STASH!

IF YOU'RE trying to convince a judge to throw out an arrest warrant against you, it's probably a good idea to leave your cocaine stash at home.

A warrant was issued for Brian Deshawn Quick, 21, of Hillsborough, N.C., after he was ticketed for driving with a revoked license and failed to appear in court to face the charge.

dope of the week

While waiting for his turn to see the judge, Quick apparently fell asleep and missed his name being called. And by the time it was finally called again, it was 4 p.m., and nearly the end of the day.

District Court Judge Alonzo Coleman refused to withdraw the warrant and ordered Quick to be placed under arrest and immediately taken to jail on a $350 bond.

The judge asked Court Deputy Charles Nordan to take Quick into custody and walk him across the street to the Orange County Jail.

That's when Quick cracked under pressure, say cops.

"He said he really had to go to the bathroom bad," recalls Nordan.

And in his 30 years of law enforcement experience, Nordan says he's learned when someone under arrest suddenly has to go to the bathroom, there's probably something he wants to get rid of.

"Every time somebody says something to me like that, it's because they have something to hide."

So Nordan put Quick in handcuffs and told him he could use the bathroom, but only after they got to the jail.

"He was acting very nervous," he remembers. "I asked him if he had any contraband on him, and he said, 'Yes, I've got some drugs,'" Nordan claims.

Bingo.

When they arrived, Nordan informed officials of what Quick had told him. Jailers searched him, then called the Sheriff's office to report what they'd found.

"They said a guy came in, and they found a bunch of dope on him," says investigator Randy Hawkins.

As it turned out, Quick had two bags of crack cocaine and one bag of powdered cocaine in his possession at the time of his trial, say cops.

His charges have now been upped from a simple suspended license to intent to sell and deliver cocaine.

"That's why he wins the dumb crook of the week award," Hawkins says.

An officer frisks a man. Cops are always on the lookout for cocaine (in bag).

HOT POOP

A woman disgusted by her cat's smelly kitty litter set her house on fire to get rid of the stench.

Instead of just scooping the poop and throwing it away, authorities say Marie Adeline Calkins, of Port Angeles, Wash., tried to destroy the stinky litter with burning newspapers. Police say she claimed the smell was apparently depressing her and she didn't know how else to get rid of it.

The fiery solution she came up with ended up burning down her house and causing $100,000 in damage.

Calkins is being held in jail and has been ordered by a judge to undergo a mental exam.

A shopper wrestled a supermarket clerk into a headlock because she wouldn't get her iced tea and lemonade for her.

The Pennsylvania woman ordered the clerk to retrieve jugs of the beverages she'd forgotten to pick up and became agitated after being told she couldn't leave her post.

FREED CONVICT TURNS HIS HOUSE INTO PRISON

By JAKE ANDERSON

A LIFELONG convict who was released from prison couldn't handle his freedom. So he turned his house into a prison.

Melvin "Shotgun" Jackson spent 32 years in a penitentiary for armed robbery, before being released last September. He quickly discovered he couldn't deal with his change of status.

"Freedom's just another word for nothing left to lose," Jackson says. "The idea of having windows I could open and a front door that I could just walk through anytime freaked me out."

So Jackson installed prison bars on all his windows, and put a lock on the door that only opens automatically for an hour a day, at 2 p.m.

"Then I walk into my backyard, which I redid to look like a prison yard."

Jackson also tore out the door to his bathroom and put an uncomfortable bunk bed in the bedroom.

"Also, I have no telephone, a tiny portable TV, and the lights automatically shut off at 10 p.m."

With the money he hid from the armed robbery, Jackson hired a cook.

BILLIONAIRE TRADES IN WIFE EVERY 10,000 MILES

He likes a new model every trip!

By CONNIE JUNG

JET-SETTING billionaire Roger Darling changes wives like most guys change the air fresheners in their cars — every 10,000 miles!

And what might seem like a shameful abuse of women to some people "is really a good thing," says the dapper British real estate tycoon, who's walked the aisle with 22 different gals since 1997.

"For one thing, we never get tired of seeing each other because the way I like to globe trot, it doesn't take long to reach that 10,000 mile limit.

"And we mustn't forget that the ladies get to spend the time with me, which, I promise you, is a treat beyond compare."

As a self-proclaimed "travel nut," Darling, 65, winds up staying hitched anywhere from three days to six months, depending on where he's got a hankering to go.

His union with British shop girl Marla Smith-Darling lasted just long enough for them to jet from London to Tokyo and back over a long weekend.

The longest he's stayed hitched was to Spanish airline stewardess Consuela Ramirez Mendes-Darling.

Their 24 weeks as a couple was spent touring rural Spain, France, Belgium and Germany in the back seat of a stretch limo, traveling from rustic town to remote getaway at an average of 59 miles per day.

Marie Jenkins-Darling, of Boston, met Darling in a bar and was so charmed by his dashing

LOONY BABE MARRIES HER MIRROR!

By DEBBIE CHURCH

AFTER YEARS of searching for Mr. Right, super-sexy Martha Studemeyer stopped trying to find a guy who could make her happy — and married a full-length mirror instead.

And if you've got a weak heart or are easily offended, we strongly advise you to stop reading now before the 23-year-old woman and the new "mate" she calls "Meera" tell you — in their own words — about their sizzling honeymoon sex-capades in Hawaii!

"It was an unforgettable experience for both of us, filled with mutual appreciation and all the hot me-on-Meera sex we could handle," Studemeyer and her "significant other" seemingly coo in tandem during an interview in their upscale apartment in Seattle, Wash.

"We made sure to bring all the special toys that make our intimacies so special — including the glass cleaner and paper towels I use to clean Meera up after our numerous sizzling love sessions, especially those with the coconut oil and edible panties.

"We could have just died when the maids at our motel caught us fooling around with one of those things in the broom closet behind the ice machine!

that poor busboy almost went into shock when he walked in and caught Meera tempting me with the business end of a vibrator."

Studemeyer says some people think her marriage to Meera is a joke, "but I honestly believe we were made for each other."

She also believes the union to be "strictly legitimate," because "Meera and I tied the knot in one of those special civil ceremonies that the mayor of San Francisco conducted for gay couples before the California Supreme Court told him to cut it out.

"I'm not gay, but I really do love Meera. God knows I tried to find a man who would treat me enough. They all wanted to act like they were my equal instead of worshipping the ground I walk on."

Studemeyer says she and her mirror-image mate have more in common than just sizzling sex and lots of it.

"We're perfectly attuned in other areas, too," she explains. "We both love Italian food and a martini before dinner.

"We both squeeze toothpaste from the top of the tube. And we both hate it when somebody burps without saying 'excuse me.'"

"I just hope she doesn't start leaving the toilet lid up in the middle of the night now that we're hitched. She hasn't yet.

MAN PREDICTS 'FUTURE' BY KEEPING TOWN ONE DAY BEHIND

By BERNIE PYLE

AN ALABAMA man flawlessly predicts the "future" by convincing everyone else in town that it's yesterday!

"I got everyone in town reading yesterday's newspapers and watching yesterday's news," says Winston Larue. "So if today is say, February 19, everyone here thinks it's really February 18!

"Then I 'predict' what's going to happen 'today' because I've already read the REAL today's paper – which THEY won't read until tomorrow!"

Larue got the idea when he moved to Obar, Ala., population 500, four years ago. "I thought, 'These people are living in the past.' And then I thought 'Hey, what if they REALLY lived in the past – like yesterday?' "

Larue bought distribution rights to the town's only newspaper and radio station. "Then I just deliver all the news one day late." The one TV station only plays old Hee Haw re-runs, so that's not a problem, either.

WORLD-SHAKING DISCOVERY

UFO FOUND ON KILLER TSUNAMI

COPS IN Missoula, Mont., say 27-year-old Wendy Carpsdale was last seen on her way to a party last Halloween.

By MIKE FOSTER

AN ASTOUNDING discovery of cosmic proportions has been made in the wake of the horrific Asian tsunami that has killed more than 150,000 men, women and children.

Weekly World News has learned from a respected scientific source that rescuers searching for survivors of the December 26 monster wave stumbled across a UFO half buried in the beach on Hong Island, a remote isle off the coast of Thailand.

Thai officials have desperately tried to hush up the staggering find, but WWN has managed to obtain top-secret photos of the craft, which measures 90 feet across, and its insides taken by Thai solders and other officials probing the discovery.

The source tells WWN that the drowned corpses of two space alien astronauts were found in the saucer-shaped craft's cockpit.

Even more incredible, a human abductee — a Missoula, Mont., woman missing since October 31 — was found strapped to an examination table in a water-tight chamber. The source says she was naked, babbling incoherently and was possibly a guinea pig for ghoulish experiments.

"The human survivor, identified as 27-year-old Wendy Carpsdale, has been airlifted to a medical facility in Bangkok," reveals contacts in the Thai scientific community.

"She has thus far been unable to recall anything about either her abduction ordeal or the craft's disastrous encounter with the massive tidal wave.

"She is in good health under the circumstances, although the presence of numerous probing devices in the exam chamber suggest her bodily orifices were subjected to rigorous scientific study and possible experimentation."

The Thai government, which has seized the UFO, has imposed a total news blackout, with information ministry officials refusing to confirm any aspect of the sensational story.

"The creatures found in the cockpit are classic 'gray-type' aliens with bulbous heads, elongated limbs and two belly buttons," says the scientist, well-known for his balanced writings about the possibility of extraterrestrial life.

"Clearly, they are not of this Earth."

Experts aren't sure how the craft ended up in the water and on the beach. Thai scientists suspect the UFO was flying low to avoid radar, when it was unexpectedly struck by the tidal wave.

Dr. Wilton doubts that theory.

"I believe this craft is a submersible" he explains. "This vehicle was almost certainly traveling beneath the surface when the tsunami struck."

THE GUARDIAN angels of Carlinville, Ill., are on strike – abandoning their earthly charges and leaving the town in utter chaos!

"We just don't get any respect anymore," says one angel, who prefers to remain anonymous. "We've been keeping these people safe for centuries and we don't get so much as a 'thank you' these days."

The slighted angels have responded by quitting their posts and letting all hell break loose in the once peaceful town.

"Back in the '90s, everyone loved us. People were walking around with guardian angel pins on their shirts, and now all they care about are their low-carb diets!

"We'll see how well they do after a few weeks of getting by on their own."

The lack of divine intervention has taken a toll on the townsfolk and caused tremendous stress for emergency personnel.

"We can't keep up with the 911 calls," says the local fire chief.

"We've got traffic accidents, kids falling out of trees, you name it.

"Would you believe we had two guys get hit by busses yesterday?"

Town officials are taking the situation very seriously. The mayor convened an emergency meeting and has reportedly ordered 100,000 guardian angel lapel pins and 20,000 copies of

Texas to use bean-fed inmates to execute killers

By TAYLOR BRIDGES

TEXAS — the state that executes more killers than any other — has decided to save money by using other prisoners to gas murderers to death with their farts.

Budget officials say it costs a staggering $13,331 for the equipment and personnel used to execute a murderer by lethal injection. But using the stinking bowel gas of a dozen inmates stuffed with Heinie's Pork & Beans only costs the state $17.50 for the two cases of beans — and less if they're on sale that week!

THESE BEANS are a killer!

"We'll save more than $13,300 per execution using this new kind of gas chamber," says budget committee head Darrin Rammick. "And when you break it down, they almost pay for themselves."

He says the plan calls for executions to take place in a furnace-equipped chamber with multiple vents extending from the exterior walls. The future dead man will be locked inside and the 12 "executioners" — who will have been fed nothing but baked beans for two days prior to the event — simply spread their cheeks and saddle up to the vents.

Within minutes, the furnace will have toasted the noxious fumes up to a steamy 110 degrees, making them incredibly ripe — and fiercely fatal.

"The fumes are toxic enough by themselves," Rammick explains. "But by heating them up above 100 degrees they become systematically deadly — especially in such large quantities.

"Three or four prison pooters could probably cause a man to pass out unconscious, but 12 would absolutely kill him."

And Rammick expects this new execution style will not only revolutionize Texas' capital punishment method, but other states' as well.

"When other governments realize the cost-effectiveness of our gas chamber, other governments will certainly follow suit."

Once the actual chamber is built, the only recurring costs will be the cans of beans — which Rammick points out "are pretty cheap if you buy them in bulk."

And it takes the burden of killing another human being off the typical executioner.

"All these fatal farters are on death row because they already killed somebody anyway," he says, "and now their killer butts can do something good for society.

"Besides, they've already done

'I've made love to men of all shapes, ages and sizes!'

Gal offers $1 man who can moan: 'OH

By MARK MILLER

ATTENTION studs: A wealthy British lady will pay you a whopping $1 million if you can ring her bell in the sack.

Lady Emily Barlowe, a 27-year-old duchess in London, made the astounding offer in a full-page ad in the London Times, with the full approval of her 86-year-old hubby — Lord James Barlowe.

"Not only have I had a lifelong problem achieving sexual climax," Lady Barlowe reveals, "but my dear husband's advancing years have also made it far more difficult to, um, get the job done, if you will."

Amazing, Lord Barlowe is 100 percent behind the sexy romp.

"My wife is the dearest thing in the world to me," he wrote in the ad. "If experiencing the height of sensual ecstasy would make her happy, it would be great to make. For her happiness is mine as well."

Lady Barlowe's past failures to achieve a sexual high were not for lack of trying.

"I've made love with many men of all shapes, ages, and ethnic persuasions," says Barlowe. "Even size doesn't seem to make much difference."

Lady Barlowe has also tried a variety of erotic activities in her effort to reach a climax.

"I've done it in exotic locations, tried every possible position, experimented with exotic foreplay, groups of people, all kinds of sex toys, S&M, exhibitionism, voyeurism, pleasuring herself — none of it did the trick. It's extremely frustrating, which is why I took out the ad."

The Times ad invites any interested man to submit a Lady Barlowe will then observe each of those three finalists making love with a female friend of hers. She will then make her selection. If the lucky man selected is able to make her eyes spin in opposite directions, he will receive a $1 million check.

If the first guy fizzles, she'll go on to the other finalists until one of them hits the honeypot.

THE WAY YOU PICK YOUR NOSE REVEALS YOUR PERSONALITY!

By MARK MILLER

NEW RESEARCH has found that the manner in which you pick your nose determines your personality!

Writing in the Journal of Psychiatric Development, Dr. Victor Laszlo acknowledges that although nose-picking, or rhinotillexomania, is not a socially acceptable habit, the techniques we use in accomplishing it can provide vital and accurate information about our personalities.

Those of us, for example, who pick our nose in private only, according to Laszlo, lack openness, are conventional, avoid the unfamiliar and lack imagination.

In contrast, those who perform their shnoz shoveling in public, without embarrassment, are extremely open, imaginative, curious, creative, adventurous, original and artistic.

In addition, those nasal explorers who go deep inside their noses as though excavating a mine, are neurotic, anxious, nervous, worrying, insecure, and emotional, with excessive cravings or urges and unrealistic ideas.

And those who roll the snot up into a little ball and eat it, are extraverts who are talkative, optimistic, sociable, friendly, and in need of excess stimulation.

The journal's report goes on to characterize those who nose-pick using a tissue or handkerchief; those who use their pinky or thumb as opposed to their index finger; those who wipe it off on the furniture, floor or someone else's clothing; those who purchase celebrity boogers on eBay, and those who actually derive sexual satisfaction from nose picking.

IRS HOUNDS 10-YEAR-OLD FOR SELLING LEMONADE!

By MARK TOMPKINS

FOR 10-YEAR-OLD entrepreneur Tanya Tubman, selling lemonade seemed like a great idea – until pushy IRS agents started demanding their cut of the profits!

"This is the worst case of IRS abuse I've ever encountered," says Donald P. Weasley, the attorney hired by Tanya's parents. "My client has been harassed at her playground, her ballet class, her school lunchroom, and even her tree house by IRS agents. She's also suffered a barrage of phone calls and letters threatening her with jail time if she doesn't cough up nearly two Weasley believes his client's troubles may have arisen in part from an ongoing conflict between Tanya and her neighbors, the Ferngoods. "Tanya's dog Fifi has been known to wander onto the Ferngood's lawn and poop there quite frequently. I wouldn't be surprised if Mr. Ferngood, who has contacts high up in the government, unleashed the IRS on Tanya for revenge."

These accusations aside, an IRS spokesman insists his agency has acted appropriately.

"Miss Tubman may be young, but under the new tax code, she's just

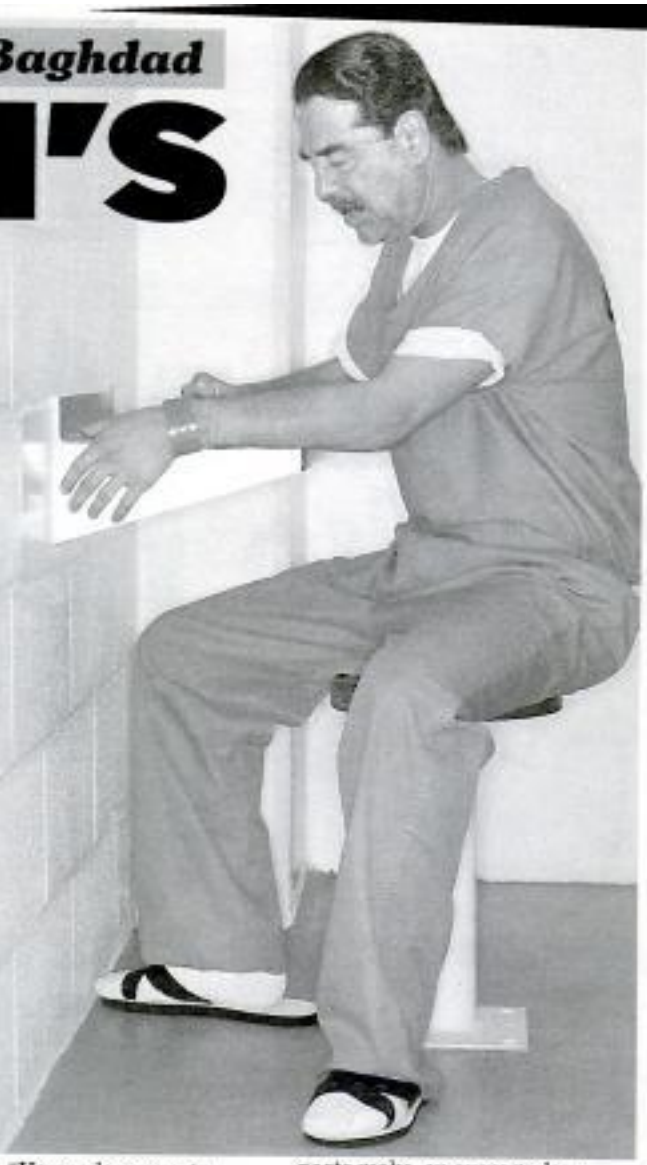
SADDAM'S PRISON POETRY



By BERNIE PYLE

SADDAM HUSSEIN, Iraq's notorious ruler for over three decades, has used his time sitting in a prison cell to begin a new career as a poet.

And poetry experts say he's surprisingly good.

"Saddam is writing remarkably sophisticated stuff," says Margaret Pinafore, Professor of Rhyming at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

ARE YOU KIDDING?

Poets have shorter life spans than any other type of writer.

"Look at how he emulates Dr. Seuss in this poem:"

Saddam I am,
Saddam I am,
When the U.S. came,
I had to scram
Do you like to scram?
Not me. Not a damn
I hate to scram
For Saddam I am

"And look how Saddam honors the memory of his two sons who were killed by US forces," says Pinafore.

Uday and Qusay
Shooting from a tree
K-i-l-l-i-n-g
First comes rape
Then comes pillage
Then Uday destroys
A Kuwaiti village

Experts speculate on Saddam's amazing transformation. During his heyday, he tortured people with chainsaws.

"I think that after having to prove his machismo daily to stay alive in Iraq, Saddam is finally getting in touch with his softer, feminine side," says Perry Drang, a top U.S. Middle East expert.

But a top Pentagon official disagrees. He says Saddam is writing poetry in hopes of raising money to pay for his defense.

"When Saddam was captured, his billions were confiscated," says Jerome Colby, the Pentagon official. "He needs money to defend himself. The final indignity to Saddam is that someone in the U.S. government convinced him that writing poetry is one of the surest ways to get rich in America.

"Wait till he finds out that poets make, on average, less money than homeless people."

Whatever his motivation, Saddam is extremely prolific.

Many of his poems express bitterness at President Bush for toppling him.

He stole my country
He's worse than his dad
George Bush is the real
Thief of Baghdad

But Saddam still expects to regain power one day, as seen in this limerick:

I used to rule all of Iraq
Till the country came under attack
But I gotta warn ya
Like the guv in California
One of these days "I'll be back"

WEATHERMEN TALK TOO MUCH!

"Most people think weather segments in TV newscasts should just give

"And forget the satellite maps, low pressure troughs and all that other junk."

He says 93 percent of the 5,874 people he polled don't care about the climate in other states or even what front is coming next week – they want weathermen to "just get to the point."

"And even then, they can't just tell us flat out," she adds. "They have to use nine different maps with hundreds of complicated symbols!"

GOT RUDE NEIGHBORS?

HERE'S HOW TO GET RID OF 'EM!

By ROMAN LYNCH

FED UP with noisy, rude, inconsiderate, sloppy neighbors? Don't pick up and move — make them move instead!

That's the philosophy of Dr. Harlan Merkin, an expert in psychological warfare employed by the Defense Department.

"After putting up with a family of thoroughly irritating idiots next door for several years," says Merkin, "I finally decided to apply my professional skills to a personal situation."

Merkin's techniques worked like a charm — his neighbors from hell bolted within two weeks. And now the Harvard-trained psychologist shares some of his favorite methods of "moron vanquishing" exclusively with Weekly World News.

1 Make frequent, unexpected visits to your neighbors — in your underwear. Says Merkin: "Going out nude would get you in trouble, but it's perfectly legal — and almost as disturbing — if you turn up asking to borrow a cup of sugar in your tighty whities. For added effect write something creepy on your bare chest in lipstick, like: 'Love to love you, baby' or 'I'm too sexy for my shirt.' Note: This works best if you're a paunchy middle-aged man. If you're an attractive woman, it won't work at all. In fact, it might have the opposite of the desired effect."

2 Get a big, powerful stereo if you don't already have one and build a hidden room to house it. "Place the speakers in windows facing your neighbors," says Merkin. "Make sure there's no illumination from behind the windows so no one can see in from outside.

"At about 3 in the morning, play the worst music you can find at top volume. Anything from Motley Crue to Michael Bolton to John Tesh should do the trick. Keep your eyes peeled for the arrival of the police. As soon as you see the flashing blue lights approaching, turn off the stereo. When the cops ring the doorbell, answer the door acting like they just roused you out of a sound sleep.

"Explain that your neighbors are nutcases and that you don't even own a stereo or boom box of any kind. Insist that the cops take a look around your house to prove you're telling the truth. About five minutes after the officers apologize for bothering you and leave, crank up the tunes again. If your idiot neighbors keep calling the law, the cops will eventually just ignore them, and they'll have no choice but to put up with the racket. Sleep deprivation will soon drive them to the brink of insanity."

3 Spend an afternoon driving around scooping up as much roadkill as you can. Wait until your neighbors are asleep, then plant the rotting animals under and around their house, close to the surface. Be sure to replace the sod neatly so your digging is not apparent. "This works especially well in the summer," says Merkin. "The stench is often unbearable — just like your neighbors, who will soon hightail it outta there."

STAMP HONORS AMERICA'S TOP PIMPS!

By MARK MILLER

THE U.S. Postal Service is considering a proposal to issue a series of five commemorative stamps paying tribute to America's most famous pimps!

According to Postmaster Frank Chambers, the series would honor "a vital part of contemporary American culture so often overlooked by the mainstream media – its pimps, who provide food, shelter, clothing, medical expenses, employment, protection and security for thousands and thousands of working women throughout America."

The pimps to be honored include Thomas "Jumpy" Jefferson, Melvin Harpsucker, Cardinal Joe "Magic" Wand, E.Z. Munney and Master Admiral. Each of the stamps will feature a photo of the pimp dressed to the nines in his favorite pimp outfit, along with his favorite "ho," and his favorite catch phrase, such as, "Where my money, bitch!?", "Where my ho at?", and "Who told you to stop workin'? Git back on yo back!"

A portion of the money raised by the sale of the stamps would go to the Pimp Clothing Foundation, which provides much-needed alligator-skin boots, purple-dyed, floor-length furs and bright yellow, wide-brimmed hats to pimps throughout the country. A similar series of stamps has been proposed to honor America's most famous madames, and according to Chambers, Heidi Fleiss has already expressed interest in being the first honoree.

HOW TO ENJOY THE 7 DEADLY SINS — without feeling guilty!

LUST: No, you're not wallowing in lechery like a hog in heat, you're merely getting acquainted with the anatomy of the opposite sex to make you a more sensitive, caring person. In a way, you're an explorer, finding bold new ways to get closer to your sex partner(s). Bear this in mind the next time you get horny.

By G.A. GUNN

ABOUT 600 A.D., Pope Gregory the Great spoiled everybody's fun when he came up with his list of the Seven Deadly Sins — any one of which can land you in the fiery pit for all eternity without hope of parole.

Since then none of us has been unable to enjoy PRIDE, GREED, ENVY, ANGER, LUST, GLUTTONY or SLOTH without gnawing pangs of conscience and fear of damnation crimping our style.

But now there's good news!

Weekly World News contacted scores of theologians and psychiatrists who say you can commit all the seven sins without guilt — and avoid Hell — by using these timely and helpful hints for you to clip and treasure:

PRIDE: This one's easy. Take pride in your accomplishments, appearance and possessions and flaunt them to those less fortunate every chance you get. To make up for your sin, flog yourself with a leather belt once a week. You'll soon be able to strut like a rooster at laying time without even a twinge of conscience.

ENVY: It's all right to be green with envy over people who are richer, smarter or better looking than you. Think about it, the only reason you're jealous as hell is because you want to be like them one day. That's called ambition, dude, not sin.

ANGER: Grr . . . get raving mad all you want at your wife, girlfriend, mother or anybody else that chaps your butt. Remember, the only reason you're angry enough to bite the head off a hammer is because you're trying to point out to others the error of their ways. You're a teacher, not a sinner, and that's a good thing.

SLOTH: It's O.K. to be a lazy couch potato and lay around the house all day without lifting a finger. Suppose you went jogging and broke a leg? You'd be laid up on the couch even more, maybe for months. You're not a slothful, idle bum — you're just being very, very careful.

GREED: So you want more . . . money, cars, boats, big houses, beautiful women and everything else you can get your grubby little hands on? Well, that's all right if you tell yourself you'll give a portion of your wealth to charity some fine day in the distant future. Makes you a saint, not a sinner, doesn't it?

GLUTTONY: Suppose an earthquake, a tsunami, a tornado or a Shocking new study reveals . . .

IT'S BETTER TO RECEIVE THAN GIVE!

By BERNIE PYLE

A NEW study has confirmed what many people already know: When it comes to gifts and money, it's better to receive than to give.

"This study debunks that old nonsense about 'giving' being better than 'receiving,'' says Maximilian Borox, a researcher at the prestigious Acquisitions Institute.

"My research indicates that old wives' tale was started by the church during the feudal period. Whenever an indentured servant started complaining about giving all their earnings to the church, a bishop would put on this bereaved face and say, 'It's better to give than to receive.' "

"The poor idiots believed him."

But in Borox's study, 72 percent of respondents said they'd rather 'receive' than 'give,' and another 14 percent replied, 'What a stupid question!' " Only 14 percent said that 'giving' is better than 'receiving.'"

"It's common sense," says Borox. "Just look at the Christmas season. Buying gifts is considered one of the most stressful things you can do. But Christmas is a joyous day because you receive presents.

"And what about your birthday? If 'giving' was so great, you'd

BAFFLING PHENOMENON . . .

CROP CIRCLES APPEAR IN MEN'S CHEST HAIR

By MARK TOMPKINS

IN A BIZARRE twist on crop circles, paranormal researchers around the globe have a new phenomenon to report: chest hair circles!

"This is the most mystifying case I've ever come across," says Dr. Charles Dexter Ward, who is coordinating an international effort to study the phenomenon. "Aliens could be the culprit, but then again so could ghosts, angels, demons, or even some previously unknown species of insect. Right now, we just don't have a definitive explanation."

Twenty-five year old Ronnie Malone, a bus driver from New Jersey, was one of the first people to be affected. "One evening, I was hanging out at the Big Booby Lounge when I felt this funny tingling in my chest. I didn't think much of it, because I was too busy getting plastered.

"But later, when I went to the bathroom to change into my bus driver uniform, I got a real shock. It looked like somebody had shaved a bunch of demonic-looking black magic symbols in my chest hair. I was so freaked out I called my priest, only to find out he'd just been arrested for soliciting a prostitute."

Even more intriguing is the case of Mick O'Shaughnessy, a for fleas when a string of tiny white lights seemed to pop right out of my belly button," he told investigators. "For about ten seconds, the lights were zipping all over my chest and stomach. Then they disappeared. Ever since, I've been walking around with these gay-looking designs in my chest hair. I'm pretty pissed off about it."

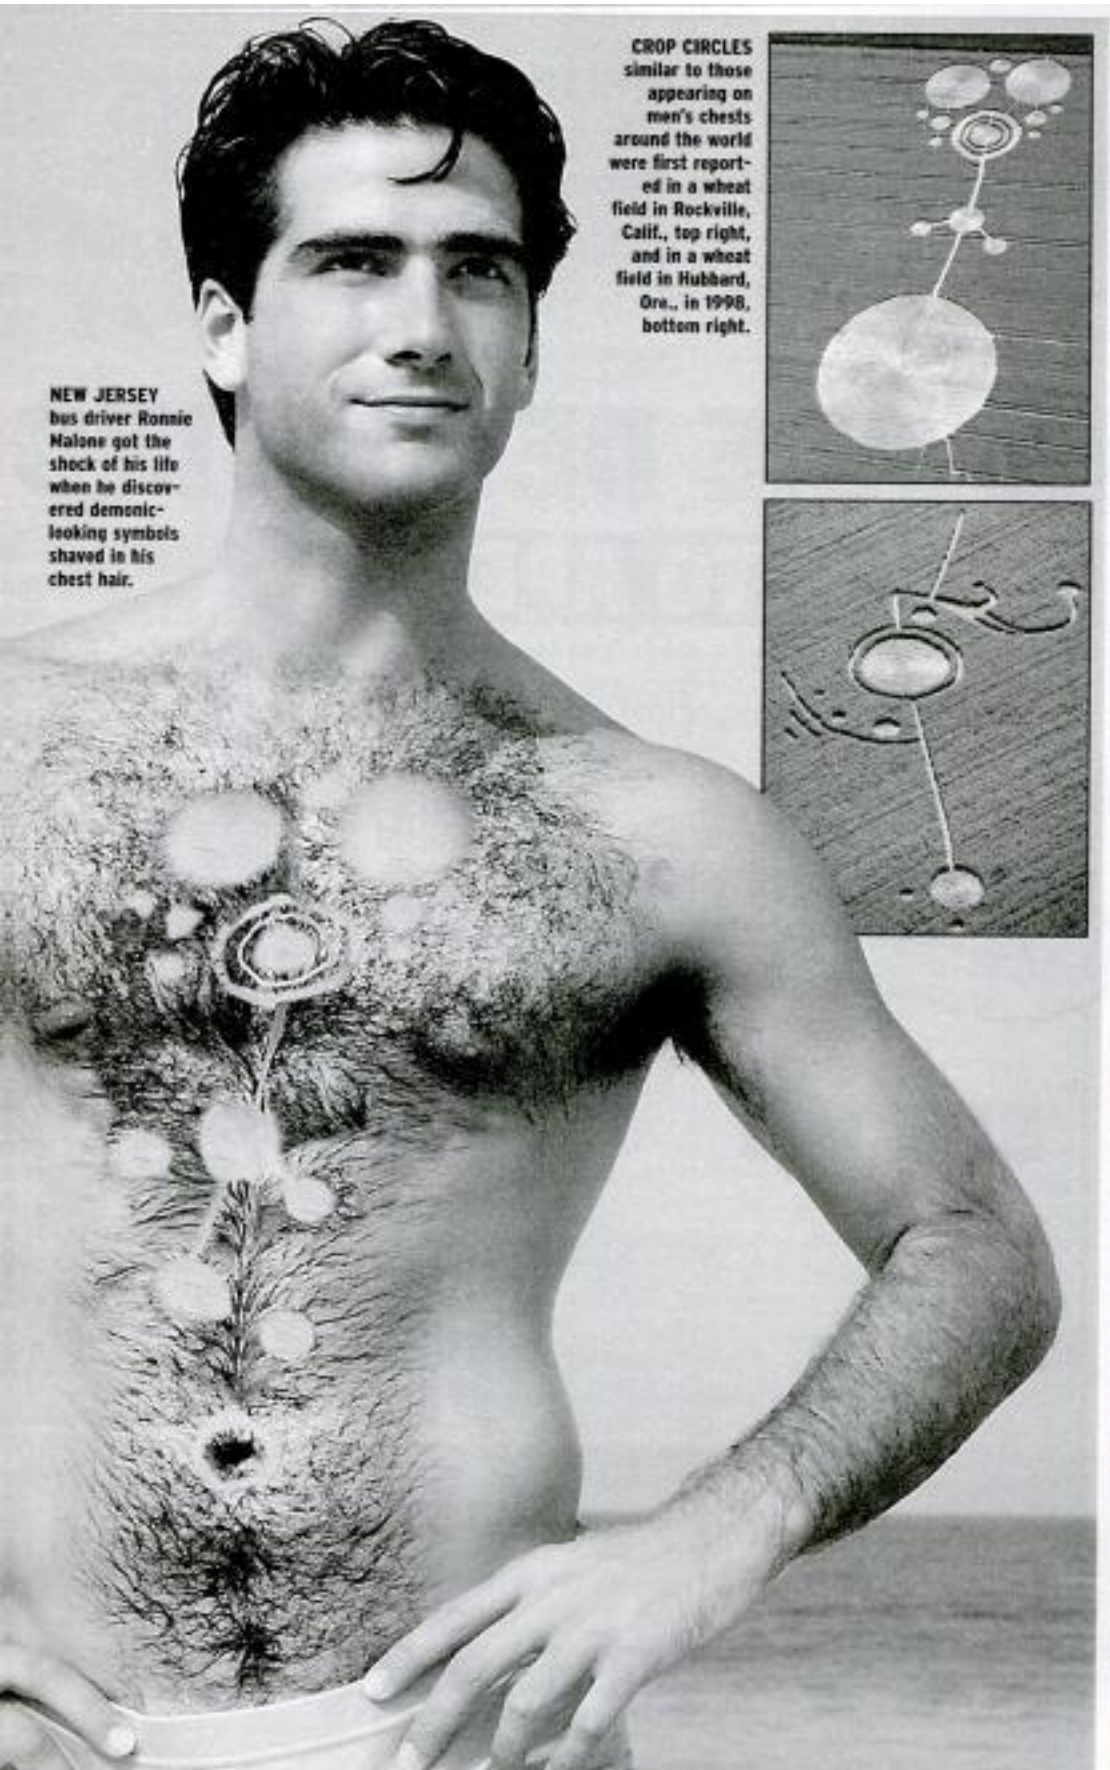
Fortunately, there appears to be no danger associated with chest hair circles. "Of the four hundred or so cases we've studied, nobody has suffered any burns or abrasions," states Dr. Holly Snodgrass, a well-known authority on the paranormal.

"There is, however, a very slight residue of radiation in the affected area, which is one way we can tell if a case is bona fide or a hoax. Also, the hair that's removed to make the pattern doesn't seem to grow back. In other words, chest hair circles are permanent."

Though the term 'circles' is used for convenience, the mysterious designs actually come in a myriad of shapes and sizes.

"We've seen everything from elaborate geometrical patterns to recognizable objects such as fish, flowers, and even dollar signs," says Dr. Snodgrass. "The real question is, are these encoded messages of cosmic importance, or is some otherworldly joker just having a laugh at our expense?

"All we know for sure is, if



NEW JERSEY bus driver Ronnie Malone got the shock of his life when he discovered demonic-looking symbols shaved in his chest hair.

CROP CIRCLES similar to those appearing on men's chests around the world were first reported in a wheat field in Rockville, Calif., top right, and in a wheat field in Hubbard, Ore., in 1998, bottom right.

By JENNIFER HIGHTOWER

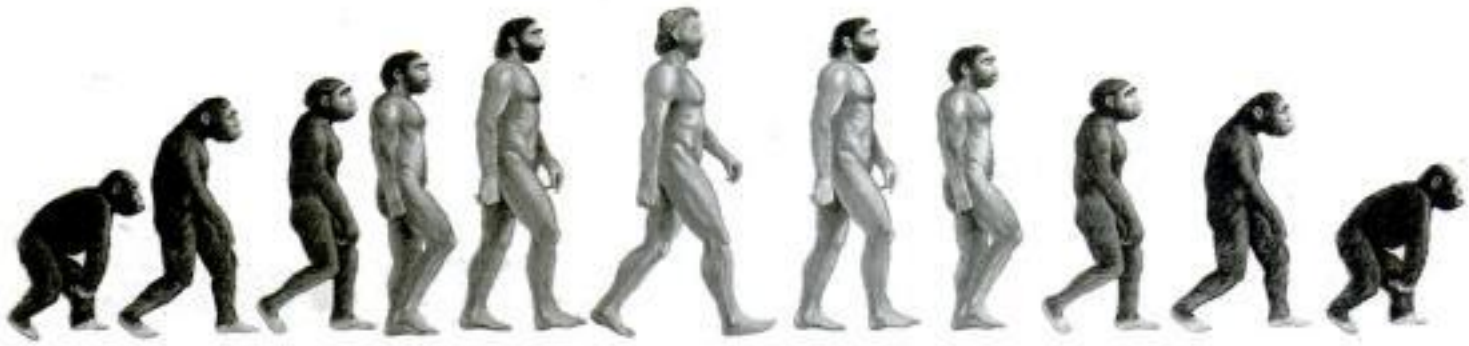
POLICE in Belgrange, New Zealand, are stumped by the case of a man who disappeared — leaving only his nose behind.

Lawrence Brazel, 33, an unmarried ice-cream parlor manager, was last seen when he left work on the evening of November 25.

When he failed to arrive at work for two days straight, one of his employees phoned police. Arriving at Brazel's home, officers found the front door slightly ajar. A thorough search turned up no trace of the missing man — except for his nose.

"We found it on his big comfy chair in the living room," says police detective Marvin Pinn. "The nose was just sitting there resting on the cushion at about the spot it would be in if Mr. Brazel had been reclining. There was absolutely no trace of blood anywhere. It's quite puzzling.

"Friends say Brazel occasionally complained about his nose, saying that it was too big, so we're considering the possibility that he removed it in a fit of anger and then ran off when he realized the rashness of what he'd done. But why did



HUMANS ARE DEVOLVING

By JAKE ANDERSON

BACK INTO APES!

IF you think your brother-in-law is a baboon and your ex-boyfriend was a big gorilla, you might be more correct than you suspect. According to a leading anthropologist, evolution is now on a backwards trend and humans are rapidly devolving back into apes.

"Scientists have assumed that evolution is a one-way street," says famed anthropologist Casper Doggins. "But apparently humans have evolved as far as they can, and now the cycle is going back the other way."

Doggins points to the increased size of people today as one sign.

"Look at football players, professional wrestlers, or the average person waddling out of a fast-food joint. They're HUGE! Size-wise, we're returning to the bulk of the giant apes.

"And if you watch or listen to people like Howard Stern on the radio, it's clear that we're becoming less sophisticated in our humor. It's all jokes about bodily functions and sex. We're becoming more primitive in what we think is funny because our brains are devolving back to when we were apes."

Doggins says this isn't a big surprise. "Genetically, chimpanzees have always been 98 percent identical to us. So this is just a minor shift back the other way."

Doggins attributes the devolving to a number of factors.

"Our brains are getting smaller because we're not using them. Our climate is becoming more tropical, which is what it was when apes first walked the Earth.

"Computers are another cause. Because they do so many of our mental tasks, we don't have to use our brains as much anymore, so we lose our powers to think.

"Sitting in front of television for hours a day dulls our brains in much the same way.

"Society's preoccupation with sex is another factor. For thousands of years people built up all these class structures to make themselves seem more 'civilized.' But now that's considered 'uptight,' and it's cool to really let go and be an animal."

Not everyone agrees with Doggins. Some religious groups are protesting that God wouldn't create man in his image and then make him more animal-like.

"That would run counter to the idea that we're special and God put us here for a reason," says Michelle Foster, spokeswoman for Citizens for Unevolved Thinking, an anti-evolution group.

Doggins says, "Those groups didn't like it when we evolved from ape-like ancestors, and they don't like it now that we're devolving back. There's no pleasing them."

"We evolved in order to survive better. But now because of factors like climate and diet and changing lifestyles, it's once again becoming advantageous for the species to return to becoming apes.

"And now, if you'll excuse me, it's time for my 'banana break.' "

AMERICA'S SEXIEST PSYCHICS

SULTRY SONYA

SIZZLING SERENA

Is my drugged-out, gun-totin' daughter possessed by Satan?

Dear Serena: Sometimes I feel like I don't even know my own daughter. Peggy is 13 and gives me more trouble and heartache than you can shake a stick at.

She drinks and smokes and takes drugs and runs around with men twice her age. I think she even has a pimp, and I know she carries a gun.

When I counsel her to slow down and be a good girl she goes wild! She even threatened to kill me once.

I'm worried that she might be possessed by the Devil or a demon or an evil entity.

Can you look into your crystal ball and tell me what you see? — Worried Mom in Dothan, Ala.

Dear Worried Mom: Peering into my crystal ball, I see Peggy becoming a famous doctor who will spearhead the development of cures for both cancer and AIDS.

The bottom line? Don't worry about her "wild streak" — it's just a phase she's going through!

Why are snakes at my doorstep?

Dear Sonya: Every morning when I walk out the door to go to work I find 10 to 12 snakes on my doorstep and they're all looking up at me like puppy dogs begging for something to eat.

My heart goes out to them and I usually toss them bread crumbs and those miniature marshmallows you get for a dollar a bag at the grocery store, which they really seem to like.

My question is, why are the snakes here? I've never heard of snakes begging for food. Have you? — Confused in Pekins, Ohio

Dear Confused: Move into a motel room until my assistants and I arrive and don't you DARE return home for any reason, not even to get your clothes.

Those aren't snakes begging for marshmallows, they're demons looking for souls. And if you look them in the eyes ONE MORE TIME, my child, they'll take YOURS straight to Hell!

My scratch-off tickets never win

Dear Sonya: I've been buying those stupid scratch-off lottery tickets every day for 10 years and the only thing I've ever won are free tickets — all of which turned out to be losers. I keep records and that's $3,650 down the tubes.

Should I keep buying scratch-off tickets?

Whenever I think I ought to stop wasting my money, a little voice in my head says, "Don't be a fool! The next one's a winner!" Sonya — tell me what to do! — Scratch-Off Queen in Tallahassee, Fla.

Dear Scratch-Off Queen: If you actually listened to that voice in your head instead of jumping to conclusions you'd hear it saying QUICK-PICK ticket, not scratch off.

Try your luck with one of those babies next Saturday night. I don't see you winning the grand prize that will make you a millionaire, dudette, but that check for $125,967.22 will more than cover the $3,650 you've blown. Oh yeah!

MAN CREATES 12-STEP PROGRAM FOR TERRORISTS

By MARK MILLER

AN ISRAELI man has put together a rather unique plan for ending the violence in the Middle East — he has started the world's first 12-step program for terrorists! Tel Aviv political activist Kanan Abramson, 43, with the aid of several Israeli government grants and donations from private citizens, plans to open Terrorists Anonymous (T.A.) as soon as its headquarters is completed.

"There are 12-step programs for every possible dysfunction. Alcoholics Anonymous is perhaps the most famous, but there are also support groups for those who can't control their use of sex, drugs, credit card debt, gambling, shoplifting, and domestic violence, just to name a few," observes Abramson. "So I got to thinking, rorists who may not be happy hating and killing and blowing things up — for those who may suspect that there could be a better way to live? And what better place for it than Israel?"

The only requirement for membership in T.A. is the desire to stop being a terrorist. Abramson stresses that there will be no dues or fees for T.A. membership; it will be self-supporting through members' own contributions. T.A. will also not be allied with any sect, denomination, politics, organization or institution; does not wish to engage in any controversy, and neither endorses nor opposes any causes. Its primary purpose is peace.

ARE YOU KIDDING?

75 percent of all terrorist romantic relationships result from meetings on the Internet in terrorist chat rooms and on subversive message boards.

Having been in touch with several

the three most frequent questions the terrorists have, followed by Abramson's answers:

• Am I a terrorist?

If you repeatedly murder or blow things up more than you intend or want to, if you get into trouble, or if you have memory lapses when you destroy people or things, you may be a terrorist. Only you can decide. No one in T.A. will tell you whether you are or not.

• What happens at a T.A. meeting?

A T.A. meeting may take one of several forms, but at any meeting you will find terrorists talking about what terrorizing did to their lives and personalities, what actions they took to help themselves, and how they are living their lives today.

ship files, or attendance records. You do not have to reveal anything about yourself. No one will bother you if you don't want to come back.

• Can I bring my family to a T.A. meeting?

Family members or close friends are welcome at "Open" T.A. meetings. Discuss this with your local contact.

For those terrorists nervous about attending T.A. meetings in Israel, Abramson is in the process of setting up branches in Iraq, Afghanistan and New York.

CHOOSE CORRECTLY – &

IS THE BOGUS

WHILE IT'S not like us to print a fake story, we're making an exception for our latest crazy contest. One of these five stories isn't real — see if you can pick which one and you could win a whopping $200! Just check the one you think is FAKE on the coupon, and mail it to us. We'll pick a winner from the correct entries. Who knows, it might be you! Good Luck! Entries must be postmarked by Feb. 2, 2005. Log on to weeklyworldnews.com and you can play the on-line version of this hot new game.

1. CRACKED CASE

A MASSACHUSETTS man has filed suit against a major lip balm manufacturer because he says he "can't live without it."

Eric Huard, 31, of Boxford, claims his addiction has become an incredible financial burden and causes him undo stress on a daily basis.

"He goes through two sticks a week," his lawyer says. "He feels his lips will crack to pieces if he doesn't have some on all the time. And he can't go anywhere without it."

"People make fun of me because I'm always reaching for my tube," Huard insists.

He blames the manufacturer for his addiction and hopes this lawsuit will bring justice to himself and others with the same problem.

He is seeking an unspecified amount in damages.

2. DIRTY DEED

TWO MEN were arrested in Idaho for allegedly dumping dirt in a national forest.

Deputy Robert Gomez of the Kootenai County Sheriff's Department says the two men, who have not been publicly identified, were tracked down at a garage they were planning to pave. It seemed the dirt had been cleared away to make way for the foundation.

The U.S. Forest Service has confirmed it is illegal to dump anything, including dirt, on federal land.

Gomez says the pair claimed to have taken their "perfectly good dirt," dumped it under a fir tree and even spread it out with rakes to make it look nice.

"They both said it was a good job having given back the dirt to Mother Earth," he says.

3. TAKING A STAND

AN INDIAN HOLY man has accomplished quite a feat – he's been standing for two years straight!

Ram Dayal Sanichar Muni claims he does everything on his feet, including eating, using the bathroom and even sleeping.

And he says he's never felt like taking a break.

"I don't even know how long I will continue to stand like this," he says. "I have completed two years and I believe it would not have been possible without God's will."

Temple priest Om Prakash says although the sage initially "developed swelling in his feet and it was a painful situation," he's now "gotten used to it."

He has vowed to remain standing until enough money is raised to build a new temple to the Hindu gods.

4. IT'S RUDE TO BE NUDE

SOME MEXICANS are going to have to be a little more humble in their abodes from now on – the city of Villahermosa has passed a law banning indoor nudity!

Although the city is known for it's scorching hot climate, residents tired of catching glimpses of sweaty naked citizens pushed for the rule.

"We are talking about zero tolerance . . . for lack of morality," says city councilwoman Blanca Estela.

But fellow councilman Rodrigo Sanchez says the measure tramples on the rights of citizens and poses an enforcement problem.

"I have no idea how you detect the naked," he says. "You'd have to have a big operation to try to bring it under control."

Offenders could face up to 36 hours in jail and a $121 fine.

5. MAKE YOU SQUIRM

SCIENTISTS are developing a new tool to make internal examination more comfortable – and it's based on a squiggling worm!

Although the new colonic exam will take slightly longer – 30 minutes instead of the current 10 – the research team insists their worm design will be much less unpleasant than the typical long, flexible tube being fed through the body.

Team leader Paolo Dareo says their device was modeled after the paddleworm, which "is capable of 'swimming' with ease through relatively soft, unstructured environments" – similar to what is found inside the body.

"Ultimately our idea is to turn the current ordeal of the colonic endoscopy procedure into something akin to a pleasurable experience!" says Julian Vincent of the University of Bath.

CORNELIUS Fink takes a crack at telling futures by examining a person's dimpled derriere.

PSYCHIC PREDICTS FUTURE BY READING BUTTS

By MARK TOMPKINS

FORTY-YEAR-OLD Cornelius Fink has an amazing talent – he can predict the future of any man or woman by examining their butt.

"Naturally, some people laugh when I tell them what I do for a living," Fink admits. "Little do they know that butt-reading, or prognosto-gluteology, is a serious discipline going back thousands of years. I had the honor of studying this great tradition with sages in Tibet and Thailand, and I am proud to be one of the few Westerners who knows the true way of the man who now holds degrees from several unaccredited colleges, says a typical butt-reading session lasts about two to three hours.

"First, I have the subject undress and lie face-down on my examining table. Then I massage their buttocks gently and soothingly, while uttering a series of mystic incantations. Before long, I've established a psychic connection with the person's butt, which the ancients knew to be the secret passageway to the soul."

At this point, Fink claims, his mind becomes filled with premonitions. Sometimes these images can be intense, even disturbing.

"I remember on one occasion, I had a vision of a client getting run man died before he could pay my bill."

After these visions subside, Fink painstakingly studies every inch of his client's rear end with a magnifying glass. "Wrinkles, dimples, areas of cellulite, spots, warts, scars and hair combine to form a coded message of the future," he says. "My job is to decipher these clues, using the knowledge passed on to me by my mentors.

"For example, if you have a pimple on the upper right buttock, this suggests your money situation is going to improve dramatically within a year. On the other hand, ingrown hairs in this region indicate a decline in income, possibly brought on by setbacks in your a session – his Hollywood, Calif., practice is thriving.

"I have a three-month waiting list," he brags. "My clients come from all walks of life, from accountants and salesmen to movie stars, famous athletes and even members of Congress."

Fink's own future appears to have some rough spots. Several of his former customers have filed lawsuits against him for sexual misconduct and fraud.

One woman, a 23-year-old swimsuit model, claims that Fink made sexually graphic remarks to her during their session, and at one point he actually exposed himself.

"That guy is nothing but a per-

COUPLE WED FIVE YEARS – AND THEY'VE NEVER MET!

By SCOTT STEVENS

IN WHAT might be one of the first truly Internet marriages, a couple just celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary - despite the fact that they've never met!

"We couldn't be happier," says Kelly Granger. "Everybody I know is getting divorced, but Mark and I have never even had a fight."

Mark Hodges, Granger's spouse, agrees. "We probably spend more time talking to each other, via e-mail, than couples who live together. We're on the computer for hours a day."

The couple met in an internet chat room for agoraphobics – people with a fear of being in wide open spaces.

"It was love at first 'type,' " says Granger. "We had a lot in common. Neither of us had been outside in three years."

Both parties say that not meeting hasn't dulled their sex life.

"Oh, we burn up the keyboards," says Hodges. "Our sessions are so hot I spend the whole time typing with one hand."

They say that not meeting keeps their relationship romantic forever.

"In cyberspace, we don't fart, burp, gain weight or age. We are eternally perfect."

RUMSFELD HAS A HEART!

BUT IT'S SMALL

By ALFONSO PITELLI

IN an exclusive bombshell revelation, Weekly World News has learned that Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld DOES have a heart!

The crusty cabinet member has been slammed by critics recently for being cruel, unfeeling and heartless when it came to his handling of the American troops, who are bravely battling in Iraq despite a shortage of lifesaving armor.

But a recent medical checkup of the head warrior confirms that Rumsfeld does have a ticker like other mammals, reptiles and other earthly critters.

"The X-rays are definitive proof," renowned cardiologist Dr. Richard Marks tells Weekly World News. "Rumsfeld is human and has a heart."

But the checkup also yielded a shocking discovery.

"The organ was small for a man his size," Marks tells us. "While the average man's heart is typically as big as his fist, Rumsfeld's is about the size of a large prune.

"I'd estimate that it's approximately three sizes too small."

The sour-faced bigwig has come under fire for telling U.S. troops in Iraq during his pre-holiday PR trip that they have to make do with the armor they have, not what they wish they had. He was also criticized for using an autograph machine to sign condolence letters to the families of fallen soldiers.

Doctor's X-ray proves Defense Secretary is human after all

Marks says that while an undersized heart is most likely an inherent condition, the organ might have shrunken from atrophy, or a lack of use.

"Whenever we don't use our muscles, they atrophy," the doctor explains. "And the heart is just another muscle."

Marks says that Rumsfeld's condition isn't life threatening — at least not for him — and that he otherwise appeared to be in perfect health despite having a "normal" body temperature of just 94.7 degrees — which is closer to that of snakes and lizards than humans.

An ultrasound of the defense secretary's tiny ticker reveals that it's also very dense.

"That could be due to a callous build-up," Marks says. "It's really a leathery little thing. I've really never seen anything quite like it before."

Gunther Horst, the world's foremost authority on political bioscience, notes that Hitler also had an undersized heart.

"I believe it is actually very beneficial for political leaders to have small, tough hearts," Horst explains. "That way, they feel no emotional pain from sending soldiers, who may be the same age as their sons, into battle.

"In contrast, look at Bill Clinton. He has a big, fat heart that causes him to love everybody — often literally."

JUST because cruel and crusty Donald Rumsfeld has a heart, doesn't mean that he actually cares.

HOW TO GET WOMEN TO PAY ON DATES!

Guys, are you sick and tired of taking out freeloading women on dates? Ever wish you could get THEM to foot the bill? Well, you can, if you follow the advice of Mason Gray, author of the upcoming book, Check Mate: How to Get Your Date to Pick up The Check.

Among Gray's suggestions to get women to pull their weight:

● Tell them you're a Nigerian prince who needs money to get back to your country. Promise to pay them back when you get your inheritance. Tell them they're sincere, like paying the bill. "The guy on the Internet has been getting away with this one for years. No reason it can't work in person, too."

● When the check arrives, go to the bathroom. "This is the oldest trick in the female arsenal. But you can use it, too. Just make sure to excuse yourself before she does. Then stay in the bathroom a long time. If you don't want to see her again, just leave."

● Program your cell phone to ring during dinner. Then, in a sad voice, just loud enough for her to hear, pretend you're talking to your ex-wife and say, "What? Little Jimmy got hit by a car? We're not insured? The hospital bills are HOW MUCH? I guess I'll have to take a third job." Your date will not only feel bad

TAURUS
Apr. 20 – May 20

You'll have to hustle to take full advantage of the luck coming your way this week. Enter all the contests and sweepstakes you can.

The numbers 2, 17 and 26 may lead to some good fortune, so pay attention.

GEMINI
May 21 – June 20

You know what you should do with your life, so steer clear of well-meaning fools and potential con artists and press ahead with your plans, however odd they may seem.

Expect a message with the promise of money.

LIBRA
Sept. 23 – Oct. 22

You're in for a big surprise this week if you don't stop playing the fool around the one you love. You're loved, but your bad habit isn't, so lose it.

A photo of you taken many years ago will cause some embarrassment.

SCORPIO
Oct. 23 – Nov. 21

Good luck is on its way this week but you'll have to take full advantage of it.

Don't be afraid to take calculated risks. They can pay off big-time.

A troubled friend or family member needs your advice and lots of it. Don't wait to give your opinion — or it will be too late to do any good.

Avoid animals and children who don't take an immediate shine to you.

SAGITTARIUS
Nov. 22 – Dec. 21

The chance for a great new life could be offered to you. Keep your eye out for it, but don't jump helter-skelter without good advice.

It's time to take a good look at yourself. Is it a pretty sight? Are you in control of your life and finances? If the answers are "no," do something about it.

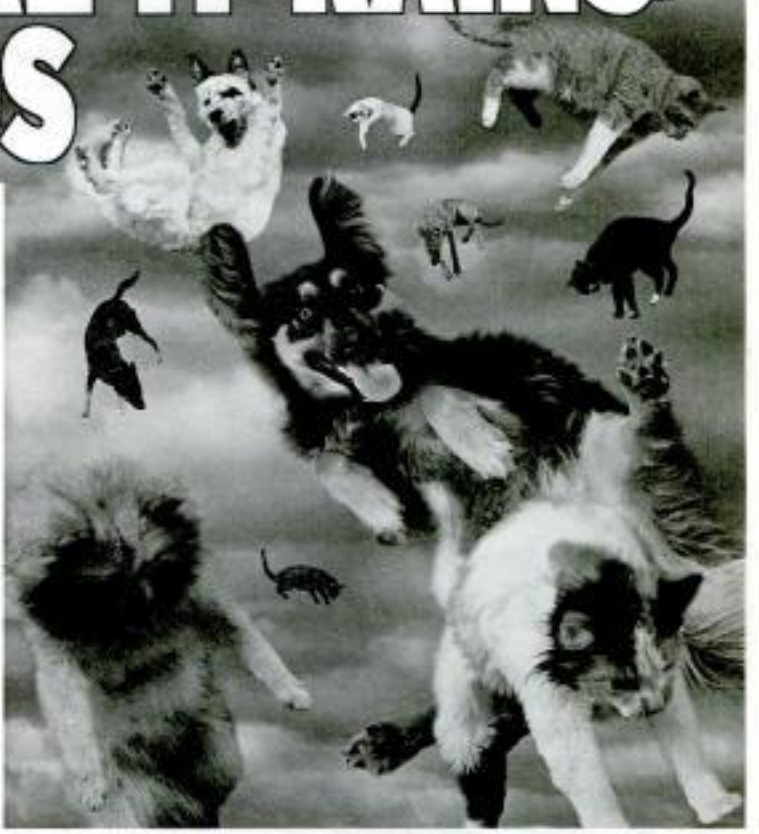
TOWN WHERE IT RAINS CATS & DOGS



By NICK JEFFREYS

RESIDENTS of a small town in Iowa got the shock of their lives when they woke up one morning to see it raining cats and dogs — literally.

"My alarm went off at 6 a.m. as usual," remembers Cathy Clemons, a married mother of two.

"The first thing I heard were strange thumps on the roof. Boom, boom, boom, they went. I freaked out. I thought maybe we were under attack by Osama Bin Laden."

Clemons says she ran to her bedroom window to see three Great Danes, a rottweiler and a dozen cats of different breeds falling out of the sky and landing in her backyard.

As she watched in horror, a German shepherd and two poodles rolled off the roof to land on her redwood table.

"One was speared by the picnic umbrella," says Clemons. "There was blood all over."

The distraught woman immediately dialed 911.

"The policeman told me to stay calm and keep my family inside," she says. "It seems there had already been a number of injuries and fatalities as people were beaned by house pets falling out of the sky. I hung up the phone and said a prayer, thanking God it wasn't raining elephants and hippos."

Baffled local law enforcement officers called the National American Weather Service (NAWS) for instructions on how to proceed in such a situation.

"At first we thought the cop was playing a practical joke on us," says NAWS district manager Clay Pinyon. "I laughed and said: 'Oh, that's really original.' Then when he kept talking, I knew he was telling the truth."

ARE YOU KIDDING?

On one island in the South Pacific it rains lizards every month.

Pinyon and three of his colleagues raced to the scene.

"I had to admit it was the strangest weather condition I'd ever seen in my entire career," he says. "As we pulled into town, a couple black and white kitties, a collie and two fluffy white Malteses fell with huge bangs on our official government SUV.

"Fortunately, the animals weren't hurt, just stunned. They just hit the ground and ran off."

Although the amazing episode lasted only an hour, it left heartbreaking devastation behind.

"Many of the unsuspecting townspeople were hurt by the impact of the larger dogs or clawed by cats," says Pinyon. "There were car crashes as motorists tried to avoid running over hundreds of four-legged creatures smacking into the roads.

"The upside is that some generous families have adopted the creatures who fell onto their properties. There are many happy children in town who had been nagging their parents for a dog or cat and were delighted to receive one."

As the cleanup of the strange incident goes on, Pinyon and his colleagues are busy searching for answers.

"We believe the 'rain' may have resulted from a tornado that lifted an animal shelter from another town off the ground and then released it over Farmington," he says.

"Or it could just be that God was bored out of his skull and decided to have a little fun."
